Two Costumes That Are Popular with Young Women During the Hot Days.

Some people are inclined to think that Indianapolis has never been so deserted. That never were there so many of her citizens in Europe, in Denver, in Boston and at summer resorts in this and other States. There may be hundreds away, but there are also a good many here to keep the town while the others flit away. Those who are home will the others flit away. Those who are home are not wanting enjoyment. This was demonstrated Thursday, when the Fourth was so decidedly observed by young and old. Days are spent in work or leisure, but the late afternoons and evenings are taken for pleasure. These pleasures are found at Broad Ripple in picnics, riding and boating. The same goes on at Fairview. Now that the summer opera has opened there is an attraction which Indianapolis has never had before. With the summer theater just south of Fall creek on Inipois street it is very easy of access, and the operas which are to be produced are those which have the elements of popularity. There has been a cry for a return of the light operas. For those who do not go out of the city every evening there are the city parks, and with the monument fountains playing one gets a taste of flowing water. Indianapolis as a summer resort has had its friends in former years, when there was not half there is to interest and attract that there is this year.
